Message from the Chief Editor

The Government of Nepal has been a adherer of the aid effectiveness agenda since the Paris Declaration. The regular publication of the Development Cooperation Report, each year since 2011, is a key part of the Government’s efforts to fulfill its commitment to promote aid transparency of the use of aid funds. Ultimately, aid transparency helps to ensure that both the recipient country and its development partners are held accountable for the use of development cooperation resources. The most recent publication of the DCR, for FY 2016-17, is the seventh of its kind in the annual series. By providing extensive data and analytical information related to aid mobilization in the country, the Report contributes to the body of knowledge on development cooperation and finance in Nepal and will hopefully be a useful resource for Government, development partners and other stakeholders.

Based on data extracted from MoF’s Aid Management Platform, the Report intends to bring development aid information together into one place, providing comprehensive analysis on the use and trends of development assistance in Nepal. Special effort has also been made to reflect analysis of the gender responsiveness of aid; INGO contributions; Province-wise aid disbursement; and a comparison of pledges, commitments, and disbursements for earthquake reconstruction; among others. This is an important accomplishment as this year’s Report will further furnish stakeholders with critical information to continue the debate on where, why and how development cooperation has been utilized in Nepal.

I take this opportunity to encourage all development partners to diligently furnish their aid data to the AMP trimesterly according to the agreed timeline so that we are able to publish the DCR shortly after the closing of the Nepali fiscal year. In closing, I would also like to announce that our future publication of this newsletter will commence on quarterly basis.

Thank you!

MoF Organized a Interaction Program on Aid Mobilization in the Context of Federal Nepal

The Ministry of Finance initiated ‘interaction programs’ on the topic of aid mobilization in the federal set-up, with Government of Nepal representatives on 22 October, and with Development Partners on 10 November, respectively. The programs provided an important discussion and consultation forum to take stock of the way forward for adapting aid mobilization approaches to the new context.

Over the course of 2017, as Nepal has moved forward with the historic transition from a unitary to a federal system, attendant reforms have taken place across public sector institutions as well as in the approaches to how the Government collaborates with development partners. The Ministry of Finance’s International Economic Cooperation Coordination Division (IECCD), under the leadership of Joint Secretary Mr. Baikuntha Aryal, has proactively been considering the types of reforms that will be needed to adapt the current approach of aid mobilization to the new federal set-up, and the respective roles and responsibilities of different actors at the Federal, State, and Local levels.

Against this backdrop, IECCD commissioned a study on Aid Mobilization in the Context of Federal Nepal, to serve as an input and a point of reference as the Government and its partners look ahead to aid mobilization in the new context. The study takes as its point of departure the provisions of the Constitution of 2015, which states that the Federal Government will continue to take the lead in the mobilization of foreign aid. Beyond these headline provisions, however, it is recognized that systems will need to be put in place to facilitate the on-lending of loans, and on-granting of grants to State and Local governments. Reforms will need to be undertaken with a view to ensuring a sound approach to capturing resource needs from a bottom-up perspective, ensuring transparency in aid management, and defining accountability mechanisms between all stakeholders to ensure that foreign aid achieves the intended results. Identifying resource needs, and allocating foreign aid must also consider issues of geographic and sectoral balance.

At the interaction program with Government representatives, which took place at Hotel Himalaya on 22 October, following opening remarks by Revenue Secretary Shilpi Kumar Dhungana, Mr. Aryal made a presentation of the main findings of the study. The presentation focused on possible fiscal transfer mechanisms for foreign aid, priority areas for allocation of foreign aid resources, and roles and responsibilities of different tiers of Government and DPs in the new context. With representatives present from 12 Government ministries and agencies, there was an active discussion following the presentation. Participants raised questions about topics ranging from how to handle on-going projects, concerns about identifying appropriate jurisdictions in certain project contexts, and the complexities of managing projects which cover all three tiers of government.

The interaction program with Development Partners, held on 10 November at the Yak & Yeti Hotel, provided a platform for DPs to hear from MoF on the topic at hand and to share views from the DP perspective. Opened by Finance Secretary Shankar Prasad Adhikari, at the program, Mr. Aryal made a similar presentation to DPs, and invited questions and open discussion to hear their ideas, concerns, and feedback. Representatives from over 15 DPs in attendance appreciated the opportunity to discuss this important topic with MoF, with one DP representative calling the program “the start of a useful and important discussion”. At the same time, DPs also raised questions about how the fund flow mechanism will work in the new system, how the planning and governance autonomy of newly elected Local Governments will be maintained with respect to the Federal Government’s role in aid mobilization, and the importance of intra-Government coordination and coherent messaging from different ministries on the laws and regulations going forward.

A study on Aid Mobilization in the Context of Federal Nepal has recently been published by MoF and is available on the MoF website.
